George Dimmock

Parallel Session #11

Re-envisioning Academic Services at the University of Northampton for the 21st century:
New roles, new structures and new purpose

George Dimmock is Head of Academic Services within Library and Learning Services at the University of Northampton. This was a new post, created in June 2016, to lead on the areas of Systems, Resource Development and Academic Liaison. Prior to this George was Head of Academic Liaison, managing the team of Academic Librarians, during which time she led the team in the development of new approaches to learning and teaching, including the creation of open educational resources, active blended learning and the development of the University's award winning Skills Hub. George is also a board member on the JISC e-Textbook Strategy Group and across the University she has been instrumental in the development of support and services to students based at partner institutions.
