Develop@Derby

Capitalising on Collaboration and Cooperation!

In July 2022, to support the scaffolding of personal development of student skills, the University of Derby decided to create an institution-wide approach to skills development called Develop@Derby: a one-stop-shop that would support students to reflect on and enhance their skills across a variety of areas.

In this workshop Michelle and Naomi will use an informal, narrative approach to show you the journey this project took from its earliest beginnings to where we are today, before looking forward to our next steps. You'll hear the voices of the people with whom we collaborated, telling their parts of the story through a range of formats and media. We'll share the lessons we learnt from the experience and our goals for the future, and invite you to share your thoughts, questions and suggestions.

Our session will be presented through a Develop@Derby guide, allowing you to experience Develop@Derby as a user.

You are welcome to access the presentation guide on your own device either before, during or after the session:

On the guide you'll find the link to Develop@Derby itself, as well as an opportunity to share, in advance of the conference, your personal definition of 'Collaboration'.
